A FAMOUS PREACHER

John Peter Miller was the second Reformed pastor of Goshenhoppen, Penn. He was born December 25, 1709, at Alzenborn, in the Palatinate. He studied in Heidelberg University. Arrived in Philadelphia August 29, 1730, with Valentin Grisemer, Abraham Transu, Hans Simon Mey, and Lonhart Hochgenug, who became members of the Goshenhoppen church. He was pastor at Philadelphia and Germantown from September, 1730, to the summer of 1731; at Goshenhoppen, Tulpehocken (Berks County) and Canastoka, Lancaster County (now Heller's church in Upper Leacock township) 1731-1734. In the fall of 1734 he retired to private life. In May, 1735, he was baptized as a Seventh Day Baptist by Conrad Beissel. He then entered the Ephrata Cloister as Brother Jabez, where he did literary work. He wrote and published the Chronicon Ephratense, the most important historical publication of the Brethren, in 1786. He died September 25, 1796.

At the outbreak of the American Revolution, Congress was at a loss to find a trustworthy scholar to translate the diplomatic correspondence into the different tongues of Europe. Many of the professors and scholars of the country who were competent were either fugitives or suspected of Toryism; the same was true of many of the clergy of the Established Church.

At this juncture Charles Thomson bethought himself of Prior Jabez (Johan Peter Miller). The offer to do this work was made to him and promptly accepted, tradition tells us, with the proviso that he was not to receive a penny for his services. That this was accepted appears by the records of Congress. "Contemporary records tell us that the humble recluse of Ephrata translated the great American Magna Charta—the Declaration of Independence—into seven different languages, which was sent to the different Courts of Europe. The services rendered by John Peter Miller to the Continental Congress can hardly be estimated at the present day."—

FAMOUS COLONIAL MILLERS

Among the early American Colonists, was Rev. John Miller, of Dover, Delaware, the son of John Miller, a native of Scotland, who married and settled in Boston in 1710. He was born in Boston, December 24, 1722, and experienced the power of religion under the ministry of Dr. Sewall. Having studied theology with Mr. Webb, he was ordained in the old South Church in April, 1749, with a view to his establishment at Dover, where he was a minister more than 40 years, having the charge also of the church at Smyrna, twelve miles distant.

He died in July 1791, aged 68. Among his many sons, all of whom engaged in the learned professions, were Edward Miller, and Samuel Miller, later one of the professors in the theological seminary at Princeton. Another son, a physician in the army, died in 1777. With a sound mind he was a good scholar, a faithful preacher, a great lover and maker of peace, and a centre of literary and religious influence.

Dr. Edward Miller, a physician of New York, was the third son of the preceding, Rev. John Miller. He was born at Dover, Delaware, May 9, 1760. His mother was the daughter of A. Millington of Talbot county, Maryland. He was educated by his father and at Newark Academy under F. Allison and A. McDowell. Having studied medicine with Dr. Ridgely, he entered the army as surgeon's mate in 1780, and in 1781 went as surgeon in an armed ship to France. After attending the lectures at Philadelphia, he commenced the practice in Frederica, but removed thence to Maryland and in 1786 to Dover, where he remained ten years. About 1793 he wrote an able letter to Dr. Rush, asserting the domestic origin of yellow fever.

In 1796, in order to enjoy the society of his only surviving brother, he removed to New York, where his practice was extensive, and where he projected and published, with Drs. Mitchell and Smith, the Medical Repository, the first number of which appeared in August 1797. This was the first work of the kind in the United States. He lived to see nearly fifteen volumes completed. In 1803 he was appointed resident physician of New York. In 1805 he drew up a learned report, maintaining the domestic origin of yellow fever. In 1807 he was elected the professor of the practice of physic in the University of New York; in 1809 one of the physicians of the hospital.

The typhus fever, succeeding an inflammation of the lungs, terminated his life March 17, 1812, aged 51. Four of his brothers, in two of the learned professions, died in early life. He was a distinguished scholar, and in the opinion of Dr. Rush "inferior to no physician in the United States." He was a man of probity, and honor, and charity, with a heart of sympathy, and courtesy of manners. His gratuitous services to the poor have been seldom equalled. In his habits he was remarkably temperate, seldom using any drink but water, and rejecting the use of tobacco in every form as an odious practice, and a provocative to the love of drinking. He was a believer in Christianity, and devoutly perused the Holy Scriptures. His medical works, with a biographical sketch by his brother, Samuel Miller, were published, in 1814.

The founder of the so-called "Millerites," the celebrated Adventist preacher, William Miller, born 1782, Pittsfield, Mass., died 1849 Low Hampton, N. Y., was a great-great-great grandson of Thomas and Sarah (Marshfield) Miller. The following is his line of descent from Thomas Miller's son, Ensign John Miller, born in Springfield, Mass., 23 April, 1657, married Mary Beamon, daughter of Simon (emigrant) and Alice (Young) Beamon He died in Springfield in 1735. Their son, Capt. Joseph Miller, born in Springfield, 12 March, 1700, married there, 7 June, 1722, Mary Combs. He died in Springfield, 25 April, 1760. Their son, William Miller, born in Springfield, 29 March, 1730, married Hannah Leonard, born in West Springfield, Mass., 15 July, 1732, daughter of Joseph and Thankful (Bagg) Leonard. She died in Pittsfield, Mass., 1790. Their son, Capt. William Miller, born in Springfield, 16 December, 1756, married in Pittsfield, 22 March, 1781, Paulina Phelps, born in Pittsfield, 1 May, 1764, daughter of Rev. Elnathan and Eleanor (Bridgeman) Phelps. He was a soldier in the Revolution and removed about 1785 from Pittsfield to Low Hampton, Washington County, N. Y., where he died 23 December, 1812.

Their son, Rev. William Miller, born in Pittsfield, Mass., 5 (or 15) February, 1782, married in Poultney, Vt., 29 June, 1803, Lucy P. Smith. He lived for a time after marriage at Poultney, Vt., but later returned and settled at Low Hampton, N. Y. He was a soldier in the 1812 war; was Captain of the 13th regiment at Plattsburg, N. Y. He founded the religious sect known as "Millerites" and became widely known as a prophet, because of his advocacy of the second coming of Christ in 1843. As a youth he attended the district school at Low Hampton and worked on his father's farm. After the war he farmed at Low Hampton. He began to attend the Baptist Church, of which a relative, Rev. Elisha Miller, was pastor, and of reading sermons when the pastor was absent. He became a convert to Christianity and made a careful study of the Bible, and came to the conclusion that the end of the world was fixed by the Scripture prophets. He began in 1831 to deliver lectures on the second advent of Christ, going from church to church. Later, he was licensed to preach and as he journied through the country made converts by the thousands and his reputation as a preacher grew world-wide. His followers were known as "Millerites." Many of his sermons were published and they had a wide circulation, which resulted in the formation of the Second Adventist denomination. His prophecy that the world would come to an end in 1843 failed, and many abandoned that faith, while many recognized the great earnestness and sincerity of the prophet.

His biography was published in 1875 and 1895. He died at Low Hampton, N. Y., 20 (or 28) December, 1849.

Obadiah Miller of Springfield, Mass., supposedly a brother of Thomas Miller, was often in the employ of

Maj. Pynchon. He and sons Lazarus and Obadiah took the oath of allegiance, 1678. His wife, Joanna—died in Springfield, November, 1695.

Joanna Miller, born 6 July, 1659, married 24 Jan. 1677, John Barber, Jr., later of Suffield.

John Miller a son of Lazarus, settled in Ireland Parish, West Springfield (now Holyoke) Mass., and his great grandson, Abner Miller, kept Miller's Inn, in later years known as Craft's Tavern.

(From Original Records, compiled by Elbert H. T. Miller, Historian, Scottsville, N. Y.)

William Miller was of Ipswich, Mass., 1643, where he was paid for services against the Indians. In 1653 he was one of the petitioners to found Nonotuck (Northampton) Mass., and in 1654 appeared there with a wife Patience and two young daughters, among the earliest settlers. He was a tanner by trade. His home lot of two acres was on King Street, a part of which is now (1916) owned by R. E. Edwards. He also owned lands in the meadows. In 1672, with other Northampton men, he founded Northfield, Mass. He also owned lands in Wethersfield (Glastonbury) Conn., which he bought in 1660, and later. He died in Northampton, 15 July, 1690, leaving a will and entailing his property. Patience, his wife (the first woman physician in that region) died in Northampton, 29 March, 1716, very aged.

THOMAS MILLER OF ROWLEY, MASS., AND MIDDLETOWN, CONN., AND HIS ANCESTRY

(By Elbert H. T. Miller, Scottsville, N. Y.)

Thomas Miller, yeoman of Bishops Stortford, England, married Bridget, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Snow) Jernegan, and had sons John and Thomas, and five daughters. (Hert. Ant., Vol. 3, p. 265).

John Miller (son of Thomas) of Stortford, a butcher, married Elizabeth, daughter of Richard Jardfielde of Stortford. (Hert. Ant., Vol. 3, p. 271). Mr. Miller's will is dated 26 March, 1601, and proved 9 November, 1602. (Hert. Ant. Vol., 3, p. 85). They had sons John and William and seven daughters.

John Miller, Jr., (son of John) of Stortford, married and according to parish records had Rev. John, born 1605-06 graduated Cambridge, England, 1627, and came to New England 1635, with wife Lydia (Savage's Gen. Dict., Vol. 3, p. 209) and Thomas of Rowley and Middletown, also there may have been Alexander and others.

Thomas Miller (son of John, Jr.) born Bishops Stortford, England, 1609-10, came to Massachusetts with his brother John in 1635. In January, 1636, John and Alexander Miller are of Dorchester, but the first notice we have of Thomas Miller is when he was enrolled as a freeman at Boston, 22 May, 1639; residence Rowley. (Gage's Rowley, p. 131). He was granted a house lot there 10 May, 1643, and on the same date several parcels of land.

The Town Records of Middletown, Conn., (Vol. 1, p. 8,) show that on the 9th June, 1654, "Thomas Miller, late of Rowley, Mass., received lands in Middletown" and that he brought letters of recommendation from the first church of Rowley to the first church of Middletown. On 28 January, 1661, he sold his lots in Rowley to Ezekiel Northend. He had real estate of assessed value of £50 in Middletown, 1670 (N. E. H. & G., Reg. Vol. 14, p. 139). He was a carpenter by trade and engaged with the people of Middletown to build and operate a mill.

He married first (probably in England) Isabel, who died in Middletown, 1660, where he married second, 6 June, 1666, Sarah Nettleton (a young woman) daughter of Samuel and Maria Nettleton of Branford, Conn. He died in Middletown, 14 August, 1680, having made his will three days before. His widow married Walter Harris of Middletown, as his third wife, and died 20 March, 1728.

Child of Thomas and Isabel Miller:

Ann Miller, born in England, married in 1653, Nathaniel Bacon, born in England, 1630, son of William Bacon of Stretton Parish, Rutland County. Nathaniel was one of the founders of Middletown, Conn., 1650. She died there 6 July, 1680, leaving a family.

He succeeded, in 1722, his father, as gardener of the company of apothecaries' garden at Chelsea, and united the knowledge and information of a botanist to the practice and mechanical drudgery of a gardener. He adopted the system of Linnaeus, with whom he afterwards corresponded as a scientific and experienced botanist. He was made fellow of the Royal society, member of the Florence botanical society, and honored with the correspondence of several learned men in Europe. He resigned through infirmity, some time before his death, his place at Chelsea, and died 18 December, 1771, aged 80. He published his Gardener's Dictionary, 1731, which has passed through various editions, and has been translated into several languages; the Gardener's Calendar; Short Introduction to Botany; Figures of Plants besides Papers in the Philosophical Transactions, and a large Herbarium of Exotics in MS.
